DR. HOLMES'S LECTURE ON BYRON AND Moore.-We felt very confident in our predictions of the success of Dr. Holmes in his lecture upon Byron and Moore. As far as we have been able to gather the opinions of those who heard that beautiful tribute to the two men whose mighty song ushered in the ninteenth century, it was all that the highest expectations had anticipated. Dr. Holmes dealt with Byron and Moore as poets and paid but little attention to the minute details of their lives as men. It is chaste, and pure as the descrip'ion of the Snowcultto do this with Byron, for he is a part of Spirit: poetry. He is so completely interwoven. with all his poetic glories and splendors, gloom and miseries, that no mortal power can disjoin the incorporation. For this reason Dr. Holmes took him up as a child, pointed out his essential hereditary forces, his dangerous and fatal training in the hands of a heedless nurse and a capricious, fitful, high-tempered, and ill-governed mother. He traced his early poetic life and rendered a fitting tribute to that mighty burst of poetic passion and indignation, known as the "English Bards and Scotch Reviewers." From these scenes he passed to the triumphant advent of Childe Harold, which at once achieved a literary success that has been paralleled but

Of the general features of Byron's genius, Dr. Holmes made many beautiful sketches. He rendered a noble and a truthful tribute to him as a word-master, in which Byron most assuredly has had but one rival in the English language, and that rival is Shakespeare. His spirit groaned over the inadequacy of words to express the mighty impulses of his creative genius. The ocean in its storms, its sleep, its mountain billows and its moaning surges; the storm among Alpine peaks and crags, with the live lightnice leaping from crag to crag, or the deep thanders reverberating through the valleys; the deep or the turbulent passions of humanity, hatred of oppression, and love of liberty, or the revivification of classic lore were the elements among which the genius of Byron loved to play, and in them, as a whole, he has had no rival. Dr. Holmes referred to the severe but truthful judgment of Jeffrey upon Byronic poetry, but the genius of Byron wrung reluctant praise even from Jeffrey. He very properly considered Byron's comparison of the features of a corpse, beginning with

"lle that hath beat him o'er the dead, Ere the last ray of life has fled," to the shores of Greece, as the most perfectly beautiful simile in English poetry.

Dr. Holmes condemned Don Juan in severe terms, but it is so full of the highest elements of Byron's genius that it will live as long as anything he has written.

The prose compositions of Byron were passed in review by the lecturer, and many of their mawkish and ungainly phrases, smelling as they did of Tom Crib's boxing lessons, were justly condemned. These things are the more unpardonable in Byron from the fact that he was a thorough master of a pure English style. His letter to the editor of "My Grandmother's Review-the British" is one of the most inimitable compositions of its kind in the English language. The very deviltry of Byron's mischief rollicks and prances in that letter in the habiliments of the purest English.

Pr. Holmes very truly said, that, though Byroll ad had a host of imitators, no one had would thrust a pair of buck-niggers into a achieved success in his department. No one of class of young white men, would admit them to his imitators has been able to handle his thunder. Those who have attempted it succeeded with them through the streets, and, like Garriin making explosions, but they took place in son, glory in the association. There is quite a their own hands.

lecture allotted to Byron who did not find their quite such indecorous lengths as our neighbor of knowledge and appreciation of the poet greatly the Democrat.

THE EVENING BULLETIN. magnified, and we cordially thank Dr. Holmes for the large enjoyment he ministered to us.

Dr. Holmes was able to deal with Moore as a poet, in a great degree, without descending much into his private life. But there were two points in Moore's private history that Dr. Holmes very properly appreciated: the perfection of his marital and filial affection. These are, indeed, sufficient to make us forget many of those phases of Moore's history that will not bear inspection. There is one other trait in Moore that deserves to be well-remembered—his sturdy independence in the misfortunes which his Bermuda official life entailed upon him. When fortune whistled him down the tide, he determined alone to work his bark against the current, and he achieved success.

Upon the merits of Moore's poetic gifts, Dr. Holmes was very happy. He seemed to us to seize upon the principal points of Moore's poetry with a rare and felicitous discriminating judgment. He was unquestionably the greatest master of grace, melody, and fancy that has ever lived. Nay, it was not an extravagant judgment on the part of Dr. Holmes to say, that there was probably more melody and fancy in Moore's poetry than in all the other English poets together. This is saying a great deal when we think of Milton, but we believe it is true. The very spirit of music lives in Moore's poetry; it even breathes audibly in his most savage political satires, but it seems to walk as a creator in the Irish and Hebrew melodies. He recognised this as the deathless feature of his poetry, when, upon hearing one of his melodies reecho ed from a bugle in the mountains of Killarney:

Oh forgive, if, while listening to music whose breath Seemed to circle his name with a charm against death, He should feel a proud spirit within him proclaim, Even so shalt thu hive in the celics of feme. Even so, though thy mem'ry should now die away, "Twill be eaught up again on some happlerday, and the hearis and the voices of Erin prolong. Through the answering future, thy name and thy song.

Moore's poetry is a world of grace, fancy, and melody that is so full of sparkling gems that the eye grows weary with looking upon them. Dr. Holmes beautifully expressed the thought that so constantly does the genius of Moore challenge our admiration, that admiration grows weary in the incessant exercise. His fancy was so rich and exuberant that he loaded with this gift everything he touched, whether it was "Lalla Rookh," "The Life of Sheridan," "The Loves of the Angels," or "The Epicurean." But Moore's gems of fancy are among the richest and purest of their kind in the language. We know of nothing in its way so beautful

The down from his wing is as white as the pearl Thy lips from their cabinet scole, Aud it fails on the green earth as melting, my girl, As a marmar of thine on the soul!

The lecturer truly compared Moore's profuse displays of this gift to the profusion of the Queen of the Farries, as she moves in her chariot through her stately palace, and lavishes beauty and wealth upon all her votaries.

But we cannot dwell upon the theme, further than to say that we have never heard a finer tribute to the poetic merits of Moore than that uttered by his brother poet-Dr. Holmes.

The requiem to the memory of Moore, with which the lecture closed, was not only worthy of the subject, but it is in the highest degree worthy the poetical reputation of Dr. Holmes. The next lecture of this series will be delivered to-night in the Baptist Church. The subject of the lecture is "Keats."

s, we think, would steal money, if it could be done with equal impunity.

Lou. Jour. We don't know any man who is better qualisided to judge of that than the Connecticut Abolitionist of the Journal.—Democrat.

Indeed it is quite too bad to be called an abolitionist by a chap who was so long an abolitionist in Indiana, who, even after he came back to Kentucky, declared that he wouldn't stay here, as he was unwilling to raise a family in a slave State, and who, only two days before he started his paper in the summer of 1844, declared to a prominent citizen, now of his own party, that he agreed with the Whigs in regard to everything except the bank and the tariff, when at that very time, if a thousand of his subsequent declarations in his paper were true, he looked upon the Whig party as having been identified for years with the abolitionists. We really don't wish to make any unnecessary expositions of the abolitionism of the editor of the Democrat, but he mustn't deny, indeed he mustn't, that he was an awful abolitionist in Indiana. Why, reader dear, he was the most dreadful abolitionist of his day. Perhaps you know that he was a professor or tutor or something of that sort in the Hanover, Ind., College. Well, a very highly respectable and popular steamboat captain, now in command of a firstclass Ohio and Mississippi river craft, says that he went to Hanover College to get his education, and that, when called on to stand up in our neighbor of the Democrat's class, he found himself standing side by side with several white youths and with two young niggers, each as black as a black dog's nose or the blackest mole on the face of the devil. The gentleman says, that, not being able to tolerate the proximity, under such circumstances, of a couple of "smelling-bottles with the stoppers out," he deliberately went and took his seat. Now there's no doubt that an abolition professor, who his parlor and his table and walk arm-in-arm number of abolitionists in Kentucky, but we There were few who heard the portion of the hope there is no other one that ever went to

[For the Lonisville Bulletin.] LINES ADDRESSED TO MISS A. R. B., OF LOUISVILLE.

Alns! it is my weary destiny
To ben nestler of life's leafless bowers;
There flies my bleeding heart to weep and brood
Above the silent sepulchre of joys,
Long wreeked upon the night-clad sea of years;
There passion bends in sorrow o'er the cold.
The shrouded remnants of its early hopes;
And mem.ry keeps its vigils there to watch
The waning annight of its fentacing Phe waning sunlight of its fantasies Ent in my hours of loneliness, how oft, llow like a May-day morning, came eneform of light, as twere an angel visitunt, To breathe its blessings on the child of tears! When oft you many stars of eventide, You beautiful and fadeless indices Of heaven's eternal light came down, as lf To eatch the whisperings of the sleepless mind. They found me ever knelt and worshipping This angel-spirit of my dreams, and oh! How oft came little warblers there to make Intrusion on my cheerless solitude, And blend the ceho of their vesper songs With the wild music of my lyre.

I go
Far, far away from that pure one, who made
The morning of my years as beautiful
As a fresh coronal of Eden's flowers... From one on whom I've gazed until my soul Ilns drank the beauty of divinity—
One who oft rose and gleamed, as some pare star,
To give my heart a portion of its sof:, Unwavering brightness.

A wanderer through the dim decaying flowers
That deck life's desert garden; where the ope
If gleams and sparkles bright with plty's tens,
But to entwine the stranger's heart with woe,
And where the lip is curled with seeming love, And where the lip is curled with seeming love, Yet wears the smile of mockery and hate. Se then to thee, kind one, farewell! farewell! Amil the sitent wreck of wasted years, As some fair temple thou wilt rise, where oft My heart will go on dreams of cestacy To weep and worship, and where passion's voice Will breathe thy unforgotten name, as if It would impart devotion to its prayer; And thou wilt fondly be remembered too, Until the sun of soul goes down, and sets Amid the dark and lurid clouds. PROGRESS OF THE YELLOW FEVER ON THE Mississippi .- The following is an extract of a letter dated Vicksburg, September 8, from a merchant in that city to a house in this city:

We are again visited with yellow fever. So far it has been chiefly confined to our foreign population, but is now commencing to attack all classes that are unacclimated. Mr. Wright, dry goods merchant, died yesterday. The fever has also broke out at Grand Gulf, Port Gibson, Cooper's Well (Dr. Pugh died there), Jackson, Canton, and Lake Providence, and will probably visit every town in the State contiguous to the Mississippi river.

We have also the Vicksburg Whig of the 8th, but it adds nothing to the information given in the above.

At Mobile there were five yellow fever deaths for the week ending on the 8th.

The Mobile Advertiser has an account of the murder of John Traverse, a respectable cittzen of that county. Oliver Holmes, his brother-in-law, has been arrrested on a charge of being the murderer.

The only way, in which the editor of the Democrat could possibly deceive any mortal man now, would be by telling the truth-and he'll never think of that way.

The latest advices from Norfolk and less than twelve physicians in the course of two days. A letter says:

I cannot learn the number of deaths in Portsmouth or Norfolk. This seems now to be ut-terly impossible. No one keeps any count of them now, nor of the new cases, but Mr. Corbett informs me that language cannot express the state of affairs, nor can actual observat on even impart a correct idea. It is horrid to think about and far, far more horrid to see. He tells me he was at Norfolk a few days since and saw 600 cases in one ward of the City Hospital. saw 68 lying ill, of whom 40 were dying, and 3 died while he was there. He saw 12 bodies piled up in one corner of the room awaiting burials.

[From this morning's Journal.]

BRIDGETON, Sept. 14. At a meeting of citizens held last evening, a commissioner was appointed to solicit subscriptions for the aid of the sufferers at Norfolk and Portsmouth. Over $4,000 has already been collected, and the amount will be considerably in-

CHICAGO, Sept. 14. Senor Luis de Vidal, appointed minister to Washington under the administration of Santa Anna, arrived at Cape Girardeau, Mo., last week, from New Orleans, accompanied by his wife and two step-sons. He left on last Saturday for Washington. De Foster, Vidal's stepson, gives it as his opinion that Almonte, the present minister, will be chosen President of the new republic. He says Santa Anna will not return to power again, and affirms that there is not the slightest chance of Northern Mexico consenting to be annexed to the United States.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 14. A committee was appointed to-day by the Chamber of Commerce of this city to collect subscriptions for the relief of the yellew fever sufferers at Norfolk and Portsmouth. The contributions are said to be liberal. The committee will report at 9 o'clock to-morrow.

ROCHESTER, Sept. 12. The Genesee powder mills exploded again this evening at half-past 6. There were four explosions, there being four separate buildings. This is the sixth time it has blown up in as many years. No one injured. Loss very heavy.

Mrs. Opendorf, the German woman residing on Hopkins, near Linn, of whom mention was made yesterday that she had attempted suicide on the day previous, made a second attempt on her life yesterday morning by cutting her throat with a pair of scissors. This time she succeeded so far that all hope of her recovery has been abandoned .- Cin. Gaz.

First Hogshead of Tobacco.- The first hogshead of new tobacco for the season was ceived here this morning, brought down by the steamer Rapides. It was taken on board at Hickman, is from the plantation of Govin Cox, Esq., Fulton county, Ky., and is consigned to to Meagrs. R. Yeatman & Co.—N. O. Pic., 8th.

Fourth Day.

To the Editors of the Louisville Journal: LEXINGTON, Sept. 14. GENTLEMEN-The exhibition of horses was not concluded yesterday until a late hour in the day-every class was most nobly represented. To bestow special praise upon any animal, or class, I should be at a loss to determine where to begin, when all were models of beauty and perfection. The horses in harness, and particularly matched horses, were objects of much admiration. But to my fancy, the most interesting animals that entered the ring during the day was mare colts, under one year old. There were fourteen entries, and more beautiful animals I challenge the world to produce. Although there were slight showers during the afternoon, yesterday was decidedly pleasant.

In my letter of Tuesday, I alluded to some Threshing Machines and Seperators on the grounds. I have since taken an opportunity to examine them more fully. They are of the style which produced such a censation in Paris. Those I noticed were of two sizes, manufactured by Owens, Lane, & Dyer, of Hamilton, O. The large one is on wheels, and is intended for neighborhood work, going from farm to farm. It is said to thresh, and perfectly clean, at one operation, from 460 to 600 bushels per day. The small one is just what is wanted by our farmefs who thresh their own grain. It will thresh and clean from 150 to 300 bushels in a day, doing the work thoroughly, delivering the grain the bags. The workmanship appears to be every way well executed. I allude to these machines because there has been considerable inquiry for them during the present season.

To-day the great amphitheatre is almost forsaken, although the weather has been more pleasant than either of the preceding days .-The ladies, who, by their presence and their siniles, afford the great attracting feature of the fair are here, but in small numbers. Perhaps they are not admirers of draught horses and mules, but certainly many of these exhibited here to-day, particularly the latter, are truly beautiful, but on this point they may differ with me in opinion, but I think even the worthy projectors of this noble animal may be considered handsome in their way. I have seen many fine specimens of the English draught horse, but the draught horses exhibited here to-day I greatly prefer to them. While these possess great weight, strength, and powers of endurance, they also have the activity and quickness of motion not claimed for the English race.

I regret that I am compelled to leave the ground before the jacks are brought in. I understand there are some to be exhibited of gigantic size.

As I intimated in my last letter, this day closes the sixth exhibition of the Kentucky Agricultural and Mechanical Association. Taking it altogether it has been an eminently successful one, reflecting great credit upon the members, and particularly upon the president and managers.

The fair has passed off with unusual quiet. Amid the thousands who have attended, I have noticed but few instances of drunkenness, nor Portsmouth by mail chronicle the death of no have I heard of a single instance of a breach of the peace, and the utmost harmony and good feeling seems to have prevailed throughout.

During each day I have been laid under special obligations to E. Milton, Esq., the obliging secretary of the association, and his nephew, Wm. E. Milton, Esq., of Louisville, for early copies of the awards of premiums.

I can obtain but an incompleie list of the premiums awarded to-day, up to the time of the leaving of the mail. I will send it in full to-H. P. B.

THE ABSURDITY OF QUARANTINES. - Our telegraphic despatches announce that the New York Board of Health, on the 14th instant, passed an ordinance requiring vessels from Baltimore and Portsmouth to perform quarantine until the 1st of November. It is difficult to credit the fact that any intelligent people can support or submit to such a relic of the dark ages as this. Not very long ago, a friend of ours prepared an article favoring quarantines, at least as an experiment, and it was published in our paper, but undoubtedly the experiment had long ago been tried sufficiently.

Yellow fever never was imported into any place under the sun; it is always the production of the locality in which it occurs. Contagionists and those interested in quarantine salaries can, in seaport towns, always show, upon the appearance of yellow fever in a city, that a vessel has just come into its port from some infected place, but this is no fact for the establishment of quarantine absurdities. A test of this may be seen in the truth, that, if vessels loaded with cases of yellow fever were to go daily into ports where no local cause could be found, there would not be one case of yellow fever in that port except among the imported people. There is no season, when yellow fever prevails in New Orleans, that cases of the disease in its most fatal forms are not brought to Louisville, and people here do not any more attempt to shun such cases, under the absurd fear of contagion, than they do to shun contact with the cases of chills and fever, head-ache, or any kindred disease. There have been over twenty violent cases of yellow fever here this season, landed from New Orleans boats, and they were taken into our liotels and nursed without the least evil to any resident of this city. And such has been the annual experience of Louisville for more than forty years. And the same result, in the same circumstances, will always occur in any part of the world.

But let us admit that yellow fever is contagious, and we shall see that the New York quarantine is as absurd as an old wife's fable, and really resembles Sidney Smith's Dame Partington in her attempts to sweep the surging tides of the Atlantic beach with her brooms and mops. The quarantine regulations at New York coerce all vessels from Baltimore, Portsmouth, and Norfolk not to pass beyond Staten Island toward New York city until the 1st of November, but they make no attempt to arrest the land intercourse between those cities and the city of New York. Not one individual who goes by water to New York from Pertsmouth or Baltimore is permitted to enter the port of New York, but thousands may do it by railway! What can surpass the idiocy of attempting quarantiaes on water that cannot be enforced on land? If travelers or goods can carry yellow fever by water from Norfolk, Portsmouth, or Baltimore to New York, the same persons and goods can do it by land. We venture the assertion, that, for each person who goes from the infected cities by water to New York, forty go by land. Yet the New York Board of Health attempt to curb the little evil, while they let the monster one run at large! These things are humiliating. It is shameful, that, in this age of light, of science, of reason, and of experience, the New York Board of Health has not one grain of common sense beyond that recorded by Hecker in his history of the epidemics of the fifteenth century, as exhibited by the Italian cities during the progress of Black Death and Sweating Sickness. As the stupidity, superstition, and deplorable ignorance of Milan and Florence taught in the fifteenth century, the New York Board of Health now teach. All the accumulations of experience and observation which science, time, and the enlarged learning that medical and sanitary philosophy have piled up mountain high appeal in vain to the stupid ignorance and interested folly of a quarantine board. That incubus is as impervious to truth and light as the that matter, a quarantine board itself is as utterly devoid of human sympathies as a millstone. For its regulations are not only founded upon gross ignorance, but they are cruel in the extreme. They forbid the sufferer to fly from impending danger, and shut the door in the face of his afflictions, if he comes by water. Yet there is not a hotel in New York city that does not give a cheerful welcome to paying residents of Baltimore, Portsmouth, or Norfolk. The New York Board of Health might for decency's sake, if for nothing else, be consistent in their ignorance, absurdity, and quackery. Let them at once rescind their foolish ordinance of the 14th, and, like men with at least a small allowance of sense, say that, since they cannot arrest the land travel from infected places, it is sheer folly to attempt to arrest that by water.

Again; why do they fix upon the first of November as the time when the sky of Baltimore and Norfolk will clear up? Surely they are not so ignorant of the history of yellow fever as not to know that cases of the disease may contique to develope themselves for months. Take a no orious example from among a multitude. A regiment was sent from England to India, and the Governor-General ordered it to Pondicherry. He was warned that the unacclimated regimen would be destroyed by yellow fever if sent to Pondicherry. But he was as stupid and as stubborn as a quarantine board, and sent the regiment. In a short time yellow fever commenced its ravages, and, after the regiment was shattered by death and sickness, the Governor-General ordered that the survivors should be sent to Nain, the most salubrious spot in India, a spot in which no malarious disease was ever known to originate. There were barracks at Nain, occupied by a healthy regiment. The Governor-General, having a little more sense and mercy than the New York Board of Health, sent the yellow fever regiment from Pondicherry to occupy the barracks with the healthy regiment. Now mark the result-the yellow fever continued in the Pondicherry regiment, but the healthy soldiers in the barracks, who had not been to Pondicherry, nursed the sick, associated with the invalid regiment, ate, drank, and slept with the Pondicherry soldiers, and not one case of yellow fever occurred in any one of the soldiers who had not been to Pondicherry! But cases of a malignant yellow fever continued to occur in the Pondicherry regiment for four months after its transfer to Nain. And are such truths to be voiceless to numan intelligence? Are they to teach no wisdom to those who undertake to govern the social comforts, health, and happiness of their fellow-man? Can it be that gross, absurd, and cruel nuisance of a quarantine board is to be the last public curse that is to be swept away by the advancing tide of human progress?

It is difficult to write patiently about these palpable, these gross errors. If New York is correct in her course, every place in the land should be closed against Baltimore, Norfolk, and Portsmouth, and the victims of pestilence should be penned up in their death-dealing atmosphere. However cruel this might look, it would have the merit of consistency and would be faithful to quarantine principles. The Turkish Pasha, who was sent to enforce quarautine upon a Turkish town afflicted with the plague, made thorough work of the business. He surrounded the town with his troops, set the place on fire and consumed every living being, every article of furniture, every particle of goods, and effectually stopped all intercourse from within and without the place. If there is the shadow of a shade of truth in the foundation upon which quarantines repose, the Turkish Pasha was a philosopher. But if not, he was an ignorant, sanguinary, sanitary commissioner, just as his quarantine colleagues are all over the world. This Pasha was not guilty of the absurdity of attempting to stop one little sluice of an imaginary infection, while the poison streamed unchecked through hundreds of other channels.

The London Times has a long editorial on the much boasted of bombardment of Sweaborg. It says the Baltic fleets have accomplished nothing. They have cost the allies ten millions apiece, and the utmost damage to Sweaborg is a million and a half. The Times closes: "The worst is, that we have thrown away the opportunities of this year just for want of looking forward and being prepared for the contingency of success. Next year, doubtless, we shall have mortars enough; but the Russians will then be prepared for us, and we may not be able to go through our pretty but destructive dance of gun-boats, just within range, with the same success. The truth is, the Russians learn faster than we do, and will always be just so much ahead of us as to set at defiance our immense superiority of wealth and mechanical skill; at least, they will do so till there is rather more of the vivada vis animi, which is ever forseeing and providing for the future in our conduct of the war."

> The Telegraph in France .- In Paris the telegraphs are laid under ground, no poles being seen in the streets. A trench is dug twelve or ofteen feet wide, in which the wires are placed side by side, but not so as to touch each other. Liquid bitumen is then poured on, which surrounds the wires, and completely isolates them. It secures them from damage by accident and design, and from being deranged by atmospheric influence. The same plan is to be adopted at

The Morning Concert that Didn't Come Off. Madame Anna de la Grange, who did not sing yesterday morning at Smith & Nixon's new hall, was not "indisposed," as has been stated, but simply refused to sing, stating that she would not open her mouth unless a thousand persons assembled to observe the operation. This was a very indiscreet movement of the lady, and will, perhaps, be remembered to her prejudice. She will hardly ever see before her, here, the number of persons requisite to open her precious lips. We understand that the agent, who made lips. the arrangements for the concert in good faith attempted to choke a song out of one of the signors. It is to be hoped that he will be successful in that method of producing music.

DR. CONE.

To the Editors of the Louisville Bulletin: GENTLEMEN: Upon the authority of the Boston Post, you state that Dr. Cone was on the stage of the Richmond, Va., theatre on the night of its awful conflagration. This is a mistake. Dr. Cone declared to one of his most intimate friends that he was not only not there on that occasion, but that he never was on the Richmond stage at any time.

To the Editors of the Louisville Bulletin:

GENTLEMEN: In your paper of yesterday you state that a man named Fordes, a returned Californian, has been recently tried in Buffalo, N. Y., for shooting a man named Schuller, on account of the outrageous villainies of the latte toward the wife of Forbes. You also say that "Forbes shot Schuller, the wound causing his death." Will you be kind enough to explain, then, how it was that Schuller tant witness upon the trial of Forbes, "which came off last week?" In his evidence, he acknowledged that he was the father of Mrs. Forbes's infant.

THE TREASURE CHEST OF THE ATLANTIC .-We are permitted to make the following extract from a letter from a gentleman in Canada West to a gentleman in this city. It gives an interesting account of an almost successful attempt to recover the money lost in the steamer Atlantic, on Lake Erie, about three years ago:

Pr. Dover, Aug. 26, 1855.

You no doubt have heard of the many unsuccessful attempts to obtain the money chest lost by the steamer Atlantic three years agosaid to contain $60,000. The statute, I believe, limits the ownership over property thus lost to three years. In this case, the time limited expired on the 20th inst., and Green, the celebrated sumarine diver, reached here on the 21st, in the canal boat Schooner Yorktown, Capt. Patterson, on his way to the wreck, twenty-five miles distant.

They returned yesterday, and, being well acquainted with Capt. Patterson, I obtained the following account from him: About 10 o'clock (says Capt. P.), on the 24th, all being ready, Green descended by means of a line, which, having a grapple on the end, had become fast to something below. He was dressed with three pair of flamuel drawers, three shirts, also flamuel; three pair of woolen pants, three coats, and three pair of woolen stockings, surmounted by his submarine armor; on his feet he had a pair of stogy shoes, with a lead sole \(\frac{1}{2} \) or \(\frac{5}{2} \) of an inch think, and a belt of 80 pounds of shot around his body, to sink him (and the breast-piece of the armor cannot weigh less than 50 pounds). Taking hold of the line, he descended, finding it perfectly light, so that he could see all around him to the depth of sixty feet, when it grew dark, and for the balance of his fearful journey amid the caverns of the deep he was guided sole ly by the line, until at the depth of about 140 feet, when he struck bottom or what he soon made out to be the wheelhouse of the ill-fated boat; groping along, he slid on the hurricane deck from thence to the guards of the boat; by poking around, he discovered the precise position of the boat, and found himself not far from the sought for office, and made fast the end of a line which he had carried down with him, to a staunchion near the gangway, and, giving the signal, he ascended, carrying with him a piece of the wheel-house which he had secured—a piece of which, about 8 inches long, 4 inches wide, and 11 inch thick, was sawed off and presented to me by the captain of the Yorktown. He had gone down, in all, 152 feet, and remained just forty minutes. After resting, he again descended, having first partaken of a hearty maal, without removing his dress, save the head piece. His excitement was intense at his great success thus far, and when he descended the second time he was quite hot (the day was intensely hot). Descending by his second line he soon stood on the deck; feeling his way along, he soon reached the "third" window, which, being unbroken, he shattered it, and, reaching in his hand, at last laid it upon the much coveted safe, just in the position which it had been described to him. Not being able to reach far enough to make this line fast, he again ascended for a hook to hook through the handles; reaching the deck, he made known his success and require ment, and, as no hook was ready, sat down until one could be secured to a line. As they were about ready, he rolled over, saying he They stripped him, and place, for medical attendance. They reached here at noon yesterday, and two physicians were immediately called, who expressed there opinion that he could not live; however, they labored faithfully with him, and at night pro nounced him better, and this morning, although not out of danger, it is thought he will live, and is in a fair way for a speedy recovery. He says if his life is spared he will yet be the owner of that cliest. He will no doubt be more cautious in future how he makes a dive when he is warm, and on a full stomach. His first excla mation on his second ascension was, "I touched the gold."

The Peach Crop. - Yest rday was the largest business day in the peach trade this season, and is not likely to be exceeded. The number of baskets received was between 40,000 and 50,000; baskets received was between 40,000 and 50,000; all from New Jersey. This is almost double the quantity received any day last year; but two years ago the business was larger, as the arrivals of fruit in a single day amounted to about 60 000 baskets. The quality of this year's fruit is very in ferior, and the average prices are low, being not far from 50 cents per basket, though range all the way from 18 cents to $2 a basket. Poor fruit is very cheap on account of its abundance, and good fruit is very dear on account of scarcity. The peach tree in New Jersey is considered as gradually deteriorating from year to year, with occasional exceptions.
The dealers here are sending off enormous quantities to Western New York .- N. Y. Jour. Com.

學是 LATEST NEWS.

Our readers will remember that on the 18th of this month the annual exhibition of the Kentucky Horticultural Society is to be held at the Mechanics' Institute building, corner of Second and Walnut streets. Great preparations are being made to render it the most attractive exhibition which has ever been given in Lousville. Gardeners, florists, and pomologists have all striven to provide their choicest products for this occasion. Nature was never more bountiful to the agriculturalist than now. The consequence of this spirit of rivalry and this admirable season, will be to load the tables with everything that is good and great, rare and beautiful. Where the flowers, those choicest products of nature's power, are gathered in such profusion, their sister wonders, the ladies, will of course be found. The white roses wil! blush to find themselves less fair than the hands that caress them, and the red roses grow pale with envy of the lips that come so near them. Who can resist the double charin of beautiful flowers and lovely women.

Chickering's Parlor Grand Pianos, Manufactured by Chickering & Sons. Inte Jonas Chicke Boston, Mass., and for saic by BRAINARD BROTHERS,

Jacob's Block, 74 Fourth street, near Main. The l'arlor Grand is the very perfection of all Grand l'ienos, and is particularly adapted to the wants of professors, emateurs, and others who may object to the great size of a Full

Grand.

The unique and heautiful style of this instrument and is perfect diness for the parler are commendations that will away apply to the ordinary Grand Piano. Fr, while it combined the done, power, action, and appearance of a Pull Grand, it has the delicate touch of I hickering's Squere Piano, a acknawledged by every one superior to any other, and, though of seven octave compass, is still smaller in size then the semi-Grand Piano of 6% octaves, as it occupies hut little more space than a Toctave Spare Piano.

The paculiar and compact construction of the Parlor Grand, an invention of the late lemented Jones Chickering, is a sure guarance of its durability. And the complete success of this new and truly beautiful Instrument faily sustains the reputation of its inventor and manufacturers.

THE ARAGO'S NEWS. From the London Times of August 29.] BATTLE OF THE TCHERNAVA.

Camp of the Allied Armies on the Tchernayo Aug. 16 .- The Tchernaya, coming out at the tower of Karlovka from the narrow gorge in which it runs after leaving the valley of Baidar, flows between a succession of hillocks on both sides. These hillocks form the basis of the position of the allied armies. On the extreme right, beginning where the Tchernaya comes gorge down to the little mountain streams which fall into the Tchernaya from the south, are the Turks They occupy two hillocks, and between them are two roads which lead from the Higher Tchorgoun and the tower of Karlovka into the Woronzoff road. The Sardinian position leans to the right on the little mountain stream which limits the Turkish posi-tion to the left. They occupy the large soli-tary standing hillock which used to be held by the Cossacks, and which extends down to the open ground over which the read from Balaklava to Tchorgoun leads. This hillock has been lately considerably strengthened and provided with batteries, and, as it has a very commanding position, was of the utmost importance in the defense of the Tchcrnaya line. In front of this hillock, and divided from it by the aqueduct which begins there, is another smaller but equally steep hillock, accessible from the first by a stone bridge, and on this hillock the Sardinians had a small cpaulement, guarded by a detachment of infantry. Beyond both these hil-locks, on the other side of the Tchernaya, they had moreover on the hillock nearest to the Mackenzie road their outposts, which could thus watch the movements of the enemy and give timely alarm in case of an attack. The French occupy the last series of hillocks to the left of the Sardinians, and guard the road which leads from Balaklava over the Traktir bridge up to Mackenzie's farm. The hillocks occu pied by them are three in number; the first, to the left, is protected by the basin which the aqueduct forms here, and is separated by another open ground, similar to that on the right of the French position, from the ridge on which the army of observation was during the winter. In front of the bridge the French had constructed a small epaulement to guard the passage of the river, beyond which they had their out-The first movement of the Russians was against the outposts of the Sardinians on the opposite bank of the river. Corresponding to the hillocks on this side of the Tehernaya are three plateaux on the opposite bank. These were chosen for the left of the Russian position against the Turks and the Sardinians. The pla-teaux were, therefore, to be the first secured for the guns could command not only the hil locks opposite occupied by the Sardinians and Turks, but likewise the plain which opens towards the French position. A company of in-fantry of the line, and a company of Bersag-lieri formed the Sardinian outposts. These were attacked at dawn by the Russians. As the troops were not yet under arms, it was necessary to hold this position for a while, and General De La Marmora sent over Major Gov-our, of the Etat-Major, with a company of the Bersaglieri, to reinforce the two companies already there. They crossed the aqueduct and the river, and went up the plateaux; but when they arrived at the crest of it, the two companies had just lett the epaulement behind which they had defended themselves gallantly against the overwhelming numbers of the enemy, but which had become untenable, asit was swept by the guns which the Russians had brought up on the two other plateaux, and besides was exposed to be taken in the rear. So the troops retired in good order across the river, and went to rein force the post which occupied the second hillock on the banks of the aqueduct. In the meantime the canuonade on both sides had begun. The Russians left us not long in doubt, where they would attack; for, scarcely had the cannonade begun, when three compact masses of infantry were seen advancing towards the plain opposite to the French position. The points chosen were the bridge and the hillock to the right.-The masses, which in the morning's sun looked like glittering wees, protected by the fire of their artillery, the different which strength of the river side, betwithstanding the heavy fire of artillery which greeted them in front from the French, and in flank from the Sardinians.— At the river the first column detached itself from the rest, and dividing into two columns crossed the river, which is now nearly everywhere easily fordable. Men carrying moverable wooden bridges preceded, but in the first rush the Russians, without waiting for bridges, went over wherever they could, and dispersing like a swarm of hees, rushed forward in columns, some against the bridge, the othors against the hillock on the right.

Before the troops were properly under arms the Rusians were at the bridge and at the foot of the hillock. The 20th leger and the 2nd battaliien of Zouaves had to stand the first shock, and they certainly stood it gallantly. The ruch of the Russians was splendid. Without losing their time in firing they advanced with an elan scarcely ever seen in Russian troops. But their ardor was soon broken. They could not their point, and were after a short trial, repulsed on the bridge and on the hillock. acqueduct which supplies the Turks and which runs close to the foot of the hillock, formed the chief defence of the French. About 9 or 10 feet wide and several feet deep, it skirts the steep hills so close, that it is nearly in all places supported by a high embankment, offering conexposing it as soon as it reaches the top of it, to siderable difficulties for an advancing force, and standing this difficulty, the Russsians crossed it on the right and were beginning to scale the heights, when taken in flank by the Sardinian batteries, which fired with admirable precision, they were swept down wholesale, and rolled in to the acqueduct below.

The first rush did not last more than ten minutes. The Russians fell back but they had scarcely gone a few hundred yards when they were met by the second column, which was advancing a pas du charge to support the first, and both united and again rushed forward. This second attempt was more successful than the bridge they forded the river on the right and left, and forced the defenders of it to fall back. Scarce was the bridge free when two guns of the 5th Light Brigade of Artillery two guns of the 5th Light Brigade or Artillery crossed it and took up a position on the opposite side, in an open space which divides two of the hillocks, and through which the road leads to the plain of Balaclava. While these two guns passed the bridge a third crossed the river by a ford, and all three began to sweep the road and the heights. The infantry in the meantime, without waiting for the portable bridges, which without waiting for the portable bridges, which had moreover been thrown away in great part during the advance, rushed breast deep into the water, climbed up the embankment, and began to scale the heights on both sides. They succeeded on this point in getting up more than one half of the ascent, where the dead and wounded of the water showed clearly the mark which they afterwars showed clearly the mark which they had reached; but by the time they had arrived there the French were fully prepared and met them in the most gallant style. Notwithstandang the exertions and the perseverence of the event delayed, still the Russian army—I know Russians, they were by degrees forced back it through information that appears positive—and driven after an obstinate resistance across the bridge, carrying away their guns,

While this attack took place on the bridge the other column again attacked the French right. This time they came on in such a swarm that they were neither kept back by the aque-duct nor cowed by the Sardinian guns, which were plowing long lanes through their scattered Their furious rush brought the advancing column in an incredibly short time to the crest of the hillock, where it stopped to form But the French had not been idle during time that the Russians were ascending the hill. The Zouaves had only fallen back from the side of the hillock to the main body, which had been of the hilicek to the main body, which had been drawn up behind the top. Scarcely did the column of the enemy show its head, when the guns opened on it with grape, and a murderous fire was poured down upon it by the French infantry. This immediately stopped the advance of the column, which began to waver, but the impetus from those helpind was so powerful that petus from those behind was so powerful that the head of it, notwithstanding the unexpected reception, was pushed forward a few yards more, when the French, giving one mighty cheer, rushed upon the advancing enemy, who, shaken immediately turned round and ran already, down, if possible, faster than they had come up. But the mass was so great that all the hurry could not save them, and more than 200 pris ners were taken on the spot, while the hillside. the banks of the aqueduct, the aqueduct itself, and the riverside were filled with dead and The Sardinian and French artillery poured, moreover, a murderous cross-fire into the scattered remains of the column, of which scarcely a shot missed. It was a complete route. The French rushed down the hillside and drove them far across the plainr This de-feat seems to have so completely cowed them that nothing more was attempted against this

Not so on the bride. Notwithstanding the heavy loss suffered by the second attack, the Russians concentrated once more all their forces, collected the scattered remains of the column which had been routed on the right of the French position, and brought up all their reserves to attempt one more attack. They again crossed the river and the acqueduct too, and tried to take the heights, but in vain. The French were now thoroughly prepared, and the tenacity of the Russians served only to augment their losses. They were soon seen flying in all directions, followed by the French.

This last attack was decisive, and immediately the usual Russian preparation for retreat, namely—the advance of the artillery—showed clearly that the Russians acknowledged themselves defeated, and were on the point of retir-ing. Three batteries, each of twelve guns, which, during the greatest part of the attack, had been nearly silent, began to open their fire, while the scattered remains of the infantry columns rallied behind a rising ground leading up toward the plateau of Akyer, or Mackenzie's

The Sardinians began now to move across the acqueduct. The Russian riflemen, after the last defeat on the right, had retired behind the banks of the Tchernaya, whence they kepe up a brisk but ineffective fire. A battalion of Piedinontese, preceded by a company of Bersaglieri, advanced in beautiful order, as if on parade, and soon drove these riflemen from their position. It even advanced some way toward the plateaux, but, as it was not intended to force the heights, it contented itself, supported by other troops, with following the enemy, who was already in full retreat.

The guns which the Russians had brought up to cover their retreat suffered so much by the fire from our side, which was increased by Capt. Mowbray's battery opening upon them from the open ground between the Sardinian and the French positions, that they made off in a hurry. Scarcely a shot was thrown away, and so admirable was the practice, that all the shot fell at or close to the guns, which we could plainly distinguish, as a slight breeze carrying off the smoke left a beautiful view over the whole battle-field. But the Russian guns returned only for a moment under cover, and soon after you could see a brilliant line of cavalry debouching from the rising ground, where it had been hitherto hidden. I could distinguish five regiments—three in one line, and two other regiment on the flanks in second line. They advanced at a gallop, and, wheeling round, allowed twelve guns to pass, which again opened their fire, but only for a short time, and at halfpast nine or ten ten o'clock the dust of the Mackenzieroad and the black lines moving off were the only traces which remained of the so long threatened attack of the Russians.

Everybody now rushed to the battle-field, and one look was sufficient to convince them that the Allies had won a real battle on the Tchernaya. Although not quite so obstinate and sanguinary as the battle of linkermann, which this affair resembled in many points, it was a pitched battle. The Russians in the battle of Inkermann, gave up manæuvring, and confided entirely in the valor of their troops. The essential difference was in the manner of fighting. At the battle of Inkermann the great mass of the Russians fell under the file firing and the bayonets of the infantry, while on the Tchernaya it was the guns which did the greatest execution. Most of the wounded and dead showed frightful traces of roundshot, grape, shell, and canister, so that as a battle-field one could scarcely imagine anything more terrible. Nearly all the wounds were on the legs and the head. On the banks of the aqueduct, particularly, the sight was appalling; the Russians when scaling the embankment of the aqueduct were taken in flank by the Sardinian batteries, and the dead and wounded rolled down the embankment, sometimes more than 20 feet in

The Russian report admits great losses and three Generals killed. It attributes the loss to of attack. The Russian troops engaged had just arrived in the Crimea.

Gen. Gortschakoff commanded in person from the Mackenzie heights. The Grand Duke Constantine was not present, althought it was stated

The condition of the Russian dead showed that they had been subjected to a long march, and had suffered considerable hardship, which partly confirms Napolean's recent statement that o his knowledge Russian resources are exhaus-

Gen. Pelissier issued a grandiloquent order announcing the victory, but his account does not find favor in Paris. They say that he did not make the most of his victory, nor prepare a suf-ficient force to crush the attack.

Letter of the Emperor to General Pelissier. The Moniteur of August 26th, contains the following:

General: The fresh victory gained at the Tchernaya proves for the third time since the commencement of the war, the superiority of the allied armies over the enemy in the open field; but if it does honor to the courage of the troops, it evidences no less the good arrangements you had made. Address my congratulations to the army, and receive them also yourself. Tell your brave soldiers, who for more than a year have endured unheard-of fatigues, that the term of their trials is not far distant. Sebastopol, I hope, will soon fall beneath their blows, and, were the

This glory acquired in the East has moved your companions in arms here in France; all burn to have a part in your dangers; accordingly, with the twofold object of responding to their noble desire and of procuring some repose for those who have achieved so much, I have given such orders to the minister of war that all the regiments remaining in France may proceed in due succession to relieve in the East others which will return.

You know, General, how afflicted I have been at being detained away from that army, which has again added to the fame of our eagles; but at this moment my regrets diminish, since you enable me to perceive the speedy and decisive success destined to crown so many heroic ef-

Whereupon, General, I pray God to have you in his holy keeping. Written at the palace of St. Cloud, Aug. 20 1855. NAPOLEON.

Paris, Aug. 25 .- A letter from an officer of the French army before Sebastopol states, that, up to the 11th, reinforcements of French to the mount of 35,000 had arrived. He says:

"Affairs are advancing rapidly and vigorously. We are expecting from day to day the or-der to strike a stunning blow. The moment that order is given, and every one feels it to be at hand, all our sufferings and privations are forgotten. The spirits of the men are excellent."

The Allies have placed 150 new mortars in position before Sebastopol. The Russians have doubled the garrison of that place, and are pre-paring for a desperate defence. The Allies expect the most favorable result from the bombardment.

As.a.-Marseilles, Aug. 21.-The Alexandre has just arrived, having left Constantinople on the 16th. She brings to France 1100 sick or wounded soldiurs of the army of the East.
Accounts from Trebizond of the 7th confirm the news of the Russians being at only three hours' march from Erzeroum. The English Consulat that place has removed all the archives of his office to Trebizond. Letters from Kars of the 28th of July state that, notwithstanding the approach of the Russian army, the spirit of the troops was excellent.

An attack by General Mourawieff on Erze oum appears mevitable. The fortifications of that place are incomplete. The Sultan has at length consented to the departure of Omar Pasha for Asia, subject, however, to the assent of the allied Generals.

Gen. Simpson's mail dispatch of the 18th

"Gen. Pelissier having announced to me that the batteries against the Malakhoff and adjacent works were prepared to open fire, it should be commenced yesterday morning agasnst these works and the Redan. This was continued throughout the day, and the effect produced was as much as was anticipated. The Russian fire, which at first answered briskly became by evening feeble.

In the afternoon, shells from our mortars ignited, and a number of them exploded in one of the enemy's batteries, doing apparently much damage. British loss 138."

Gen. Gortschakoff on the night of the 27th telegraphs: Affairs are unchanged, but the fire of the allies is occasionally very strong.
